> vol. 1. p. 347, contains the following statement concerning Wigan. "Political Character, etc. The influence at present is in the hands of the Duke of Portland, and Sir Henry Bridgeman. The mode of securing the electors is by lending each individual a limited sum of money upon bond, and not exacting payment with any extreme severity, while they preserve their political allegiance. Insignificant as this borough may appear (the number of voters not exceeding 200), it cost the late George Byng, Esq. 20,000l. in opposing the interest of the Earl of Lonsdale, whose candidate, at that time, was Sir Fletcher Norton, afterwards Lord Grantley."
